Know Your Customer and Gain Customer Insights with Fenris Data

Increase upselling, cross-selling success and reduce the cost of customer acquisition

When financial and wealth advisors, agents, and sales representatives reach out to customers, they often know only the customer's name, address and current product owned. Reaching out to prospects, they know even less. Fenris can help make these outreach conversations significantly more productive without time-consuming research.

Customer 360 turns a name and address into a detailed profile, providing rich insights that replace questionnaires with discussions about the products that best meet the customer's needs in the moment. Consider how conversations would progress with advance knowledge of:

- Wealth and retirement status
- Marital status
- Home ownership
- Household members

This information can be delivered directly to a CRM system to round out existing customer entries or injected in real time into a sales workflow. Companies can also use this intelligence for customer segmentation, marketing, and next best action programs.

Fenris uses robust APIs that deliver data in real time, matching names and addresses to the millions of individuals in our curated, regularly updated database. Integrating these data flows with current systems can typically be completed quickly and easily.
